Get a Glimpse of Newark in 1853

CORY STUTES, LOCAL HISTORY SPECIALIST

Let's look back to the middle of the nineteenth century, specifically the 1850s. Newark was a young community, but was quickly laying the foundation for its own industrial revolution during the latter half of the century. The canal cut through Newark a block south of the square, and the Newark City School District had just been established in 1848.

To get even more specific, I'm going to take a look at the year 1853. That year was, in many ways, an advantageous year for the people of Newark. In January, the Central Ohio Railroad completed a connection between Newark and Columbus. Travel between the two cities could now be accomplished in as little as ninety minutes, leading to a new wave of commercial enterprise.

A market house was constructed at the northeast corner of West Main Street and Fourth Street. The contract for construction was made in January and projected to cost just over $4,200. On November 30, 1853, the building opened to the public. In June of the following year, the city administration offices were moved to the upper floor of the market house. This building served the community for a century as the home of Newark City Hall.

The event I want to focus on is another which took place in 1853. It was that year a beautifully detailed map of Newark was published. It includes illustrations of the third courthouse, as well as the newly-built market house. The map also includes a listing of business owners and the type of business they operated.

In 2006, we received an original copy of this map by bequest from local historian William I. Davis. Mr. Davis spent many years working on a history of Newark from 1802 to 1900 and amassed an incredible collection of documents, pictures and artifacts. Along with the map, we received a wealth of research and materials from his estate including the unfinished manuscript of his book.

It is with unbridled excitement that I'm happy to announce that we recently completed a full restoration of Mr. Davis' map. It is one of only two known to exist and has never been published or reproduced to our knowledge. Extensive conservation work and framing was completed by the Intermuseum Conservation Association (ICA) in Cleveland, resulting in a truly amazing artifact. It's my honor to invite you for an official unveiling of this piece of local history on Thursday, September 27 at 6pm under the cupola at LCL's Downtown Newark location. In addition to the map, several items from Mr. Davis' collection will be on display for the very first time during the event. Please join us in being among the first to view this incredible local treasure!

Sensory Story Time and Toys!

Introducing our new Sensory Story Time! This program will be held at our West Newark (Emerson R. Miller) location on Wednesdays at 9:30am. We chose the time frame carefully—since the program runs before the branch opens, we can leave the lights down low and there won't be as much foot traffic in the building to distract little wandering eyes. Designed especially for children with sensory integration challenges, this story time will combine stories, music, and hands-on activities in a fun, relaxed environment.

With the new program, we are unveiling a Sensory Toy Collection. These toys can improve concentration and focus, or offer productive activity to those who need to keep their hands busy to listen or self-soothe. We know how costly and time consuming it can be to find the right tools for your child, and we are so pleased to share this collection with you!

If you are excited about the new Sensory Story Time and Sensory Toy Collection, you'll also want to save the date for our Fall Sensory Hullabaloo on October 3 at 6:30pm at the Downtown Newark location. We're partnering with the Licking County Board of Developmental Disabilities to bring you several stations of fun, exploring inexpensive sensory solutions. We hope to see you at our exciting, new programs!

Miss Heidi at a Story Time program.

Meet a Techspert

Hello, my name is Steve Hildreth. I began as a Tech Trainer at the Licking County Library in October 2017. Before joining the library staff, I was a public school educator for thirty-four years. My teaching experience includes the areas of instrumental music, technology and school yearbook advisor. I taught in both rural and urban settings.

In the area of technology, I have experience in computer graphics, desktop publishing and some website design. I am an Adobe Certified Educator in Visual Communication, Web Communication and Rich Media Communication. I am 'fluent' in both Windows and Mac (Apple) environments, and recently I have been experimenting with the Linux operating system.

I enjoy developing and delivering classes at the library on a wide range of topics. The one-on-one sessions with patrons are also very rewarding. Outside of the library, I am a professional musician, playing tuba in two brass quintets and a symphony orchestra, as well as being a member of the Coshocton Community Choir. I have also been involved as a Boy Scout leader in various capacities for sixteen years.

Guiding Ohio Online

This project was made possible in part by the Institute of Museum and Library Services and the State Library of Ohio.
